While en route, dispatch notified us that the caller was having a heated argument with a male subject at the residence. Shortly before arriving, dispatch continued to inform us that the caller stated she was choked and hit with a pole by the suspect. On scene, I found the victim outside, frantic and telling officers the male was still inside the home. As I was going up to the house, I saw the suspect walking to the rear of the house inside. Once inside, I announced my presence and told the suspect to come to the living room. The suspect came out from the kitchen and I noticed he was very intoxicated. He smelled of an alcoholic beverage, had glossy eyes, unsteady balance, and very slurred speech. I spoke with the suspect about the incident and he stated that he lived there and just wanted the victim to leave his house. After further investigation with all the subjects involved, it was found that the suspect had tried strangulating the victim at one point, then followed her outside and hit her with a metal pole. The victim had a bruise on her left wrist from the metal pole. The pole was found laying on the sidewalk where the victim was struck.
