Reported: 03/10/2018. Scarlet is the mother of the children. Jedidiah is the father of the children. Jedidiah has his kids this weekend however he has to work Saturday. His friend to both Jedidiah and Scarlet is here to watch the kids today, along with his wife. This afternoon they have plans to get their nails done and this evening they are all going to Disney on Ice. I checked on the kids and they were fine. They were sitting on the couch watching TV. It was early and they had just gotten up. Scarlet is not happy because she wants the kids for several hours. She states that she should have first chance to watch the kids because Scarlet is going to work. She has court papers that say they are to follow the Indiana Parenting Guidelines. Those guidelines state that the other parent should get the first opportunity to provide care for the child. These are the guidelines she has pointed out. In the same document under the commentary portion it states "The period of absence which triggers the exchange will vary depending upon the circumstances that require the offer be made. Parents should agree on the amount of child care time and the circumstances that require the offer to be made." These parents do not agree on much of anything. The children were not in harms way, were well taken care of and had plans for the entire day. With that said, the decision was made to let the kids stay at the dads residence. Both parties were advised that they need to get detailed visitation put down on paper by the courts.		HACKWORTH, E.
