Fc-fraud-deception [am]	VI contacted Records to report a computer scam. VI stated his computer appears to have been hacked/hijacked last night. An alert popped up on his computer advising that he should call a toll-free number to reach Microsoft so that he could have the virus removed. VI called the number and was told that he would have to pay $300 for the clean-up service. VI stated that he paid for the service and gave the tech the information needed to remote into his computer. VI said that he could see when the tech remotored in and worked on his computer. VI began having issues again today and contacted Computers Plus. They advised the VI that the virus was a scam out of Saudia Arabia and that he should not have given them the information to remote into his computer nor paid for their service. VI contacted the Microsoft company immediately and was advised that they would only refund half of the money. VI contacted his credit card company and was advised that they could not stop the charges due to VI electronically signing a service agreement with the Microsoft company. They did advise the VI to fill out the proper forms to dispute the charges and would issue him a new card.

Reported: 02/11/2015. The victim stated that she was inside her living room reading a book when she heard her dog barking at something outside. The victim stated she then heard the front doorbell ring. The victim stated that she looked out of the front window but did not see anyone. The victim stated that her dog continued to bark at something she believed outside of her home. The victim stated that the doorbell rang again and that she looked outside and observed two black males standing out in front of her home. The victim stated that they appeared to be younger, possibly in their mid-teens, one wearing a red hooded sweatshirt and the other a black hooded sweatshirt. The victim stated that she opened the door to ask them what they wanted and that one yelled "get the fuck down." The victim stated that the black male that yelled at her appeared to have something silver in his hand. The victim described the object as something small and "shiny, like a gun in a comic book." The victim stated that she jumped behind the front door and tried to slam the door in their face. The victim stated that the black male tried to push the door back open but was unable to due to him being considerably smaller then her. The victim stated that she shut and locked the door and that the two subjects fled in an unknown direction of travel.		JACKSON, J. A.
