Greenwell explained to me that court ordered visitation has not been set up yet, so the time she allows Dapper to visit with their child is completely up to her. Dapper on the other hand, said he was told by both a judge and his lawyer that because he is on the paternity affidavit, he is granted visitation per the Indiana Parenting Guidelines which state for the year 2017, the father is to have the child for the entire week of spring break. The child remained with Dapper and he said he will return her to Greenwell at the end of the week.
