	Kristy and Scott have been married for 11 years. Recently they have lost their jobs and had to move from Princeton to Evansville. They are now living in an apartment. Scott has recently had several back surgeries. Kristy stated that Scott has been yelling at her and been upset about the move. Today they were arguing about where their property was in the apartment when Scott called her a "bitch". Kristy stated that she got upset and threw the TV remote in his direction. She stated that he got upset and grabbed a plastic shirt hanger. She said that he started to hit her with it and pulled her hair. This occurred in the hallway of the apartment. There was 2 coat hangers in the hallway and one of them was broken. Scott stated that Kristy did throw a remote. He said that he got up from his chair and as they argued, she grabbed him and they shoved back and forth. The top of his right hand had a very minor scratch. Scott believes that his hand got scratched when they shoved back and forth. He stated that no one got hit with a coat hanger. Scott originally stated that Kristy pulled him from the chair and then later changed it. It appeared that it would have been difficult for Kristy to scratch Scott. She had very short fingernails that were recessed back into her finger. Both Scott and Kristy called 911 stating that they were arguing with the other. Prior to our arrival they both called 911 back wanting to cancel. Once asked about it on scene, Kristy said that they were stupid to call 911 and going to handle their issue on their own. Kristy agreed to leave the residence for the day. The vehicle was parked in front of 32 W Florida where Demarco had been staying with his new girlfriend, the suspect. Demarco recently moved out and left the relationship with the suspect. The victim and Demarco believe that the suspect got upset over the break up and damaged the convertible top of the vehicle. Demarco was not on scene. It appears that someone used a sharp object to cut up the top. The vehicle was left there because it is broke down and they have not yet had an opportunity to come get it. The victim was given a case number and advised to call 911 for a standby when they come back for the vehicle.
