	steal anything. Vicky advised me that most of the rooms on the second floor during this time were "do not disturb" rooms, which would leave just a few rooms for Kimbria to clean. Moreover, 216 and 218 were staying another night, which means there is very little cleaning that Kimbria would need to do. Vicky thinks it is extremely suspicious that the few rooms Kimbria cleaned, that two of them are claiming missing money. When I spoke with the victims, both stated that only their husbands are with them, no kids, so no one else could have "accidentally" taken the money, and no one else had been in their rooms, except the cleaning lady. I then interviewed Kimbria. Kimbria was adamant about not stealing the money, but offered to pay the victim`s back when she received her check. Kimbria changed her story a few times and even after being told no charges would be pressed if she returned the money, still refused to admit to stealing it. Kimbria told me that she works two jobs and just got paid, so why would she want to steal anything. A short while later, Kimbria told me she was broke and had to borrow money from her mother. Kimbria offered to let me search her and her car.
