Vi called records to report a feud with an ex-partners. The OF and the Vi have two children in common. Neither of the children have school tomorrow 12/15/2017 so the Vi asked if he could have the son for a father son day; for extra parenting time. This was agreed upon between both parties. The Vi went to the OF home to pick up the children, both children were dresses and ready to go with the father. The OF asked the Vi if he had money or was going to make a child support payment. The Vi stated that he was never late on payments. The OF continued to have a disagreement in front of the kids. At this time the VI asked the OF to please keep a cool head in front of the kids and the OF came back with no, "this needs to be discussed in front of the children." The daughter in common asked the Vi if she could have a day with him this weekend and the VI responded that of course he'd be more than happy to have a Daddy daughter day. The OF kept making a scene in front of the children. The Vi tried to defuse the incident and decided to leave. As he was leaving both children were crying and visibly upset. The son in which was promised a Daddy Son day was dressed and had his jacket on. The mother grabbed him by the arm, shoved him back into the home, and said that the parenting time was over and was not happening tonight. This is an ongoing issue. Where the OF promises the Vi extra time or offers more time than last minute changes her mind only wanting to make a scene and argue in front of the children.		WAMBACH, S. D.

LW 1727485 Child-custody Interfere [cm]	Protected Victim VICTIM of Child-custody Interfere [cm] (C), between 12:00, 12/04/2017 and 16:58, 12/14/2017. Reported: 12/14/2017. I [SeDoris] was called to 1751-F E Michigan St in reference to a child custody dispute. The caller, Ford, advised that her 15 month old child was with his father, possibly inside the apartment. She provided me with a paternity affidavit, citing that the offender is the biological father. She advised that she and the offender have not set up any guidelines regarding visitation through the courts, but they are scheduled to on the 21st of this month. She advised that they are following Indiana Parenting Time Guidelines instead at this time. She advised that she allowed the offender to take their child over-night on December 4th. She stated he was due to return with him but he failed to do so. She has attempted several times to contact the offender for him to bring their child back to her but he refused. It should be noted that the offender has a protective order against Ford [Cause# 82D021712P0006134]. In the order that returned through NCIC, it showed that the child of the petitioner [offended] was also protected. Today, Ford was able to track down the offender to the address listed above. She stated she went up to the door and saw lights on. She knocked several times, telling the offender to give their child back but received no response. Ford advised both the offender and his new girlfriend had to be inside the apartment, as both of their vehicles were here. Ford was advised that she should have contacted officers, prior to going up to the address, as she could be charged with violating the protective order.		SEDORIS, S. C.
