Upon arrival I met with David Hurst that stated last saturday he had reason to be inside the store at a receipt terminal near the customer service desk when the offender suddenly "pile drive" the victim using his entire body while the victim was at his terminal. The victim said the offender goes to the same church and upon bumping into him ask him "Why did you buy that house you bought?". The victim continued by saying the two had a brief conversation ending with the offender stating he was going to continue with his shopping and walked away. The victim now states that he has decided to file charges against the subject in an attempt to obtain restitution for medical bills incurred for a knee injury that he received from the contact between the two subjects. The victim is adamant that there is no prior conflict or incident between the two subjects that may have precipitated the unprovoked contact. The victim further stated that Menards has the contact on video and requested that I review it. I met with Manager Josh Fritz and reviewed the video of the incident. The video shows the victim arrives at approx. 1258 hrs and the offender is already at one of the terminals. The offender wearing a dark outfit appears to recognize the victim wearing a red shirt standing next to him. The offender completes his transaction at the terminal and then steps next to the victim gently nudging him with his elbow in a common attempt to gain someone's attention. This contact did not appear to be in an insolent manner and the two did appear to have a civil conversation briefly before going their separate ways. The victim did not have to readjust his stance after or during the contact indicating to me that the contact was slight and a friendly gesture as opposed to an aggressive maneuver. The victim did not seem to limp or favor either leg upon exiting the terminal area. End	CARLILE, S. E.
