Laufer called to report that he attended a New Year's party at his brother's apartment. He stated that he fell asleep at approximately 0100 hours, 010120, and awoke approximately 1000 hours, 010120. Laufer, first, told a Records specialist that he doesn't sleep with his watch on his wrist. When I (Sgt Donahue) picked up the phone call and took the remainder of the report from him, Laufer stated that he had his watch on his wrist when he fell asleep, and it was missing from his wrist when he awakened. When I challenged Laufer about the difference between what he told the specialist and what he told me, he advised that he didn't think that he told me that he doesn't sleep with his watch on his wrist. I reminded him that I advised that he told the specialist that version of events. Due to the nature of the incident (Theft, Burglary, or Robbery versus Lost Property), the identifiable nature of the personal property (luxury watch bearing a unique serial number), and the monetary value of the personal property (>$5,000), I believed a Lost Property report was the best resolution. When he inquired, indicating some gravity, about obtaining a copy of his report, I inquired of him if he needed a copy of the report for an insurance claim. He replied that he did want a copy for an insurance claim. When I inquired who is his insurance carrier, he stammered, then replied that he could not recall the company name. When I asked if it was a claim against his renter's or homeowner's insurance, he stammered, again, then replied that it was a different type of insurance. We completed the report, advised him the case number for his report, and advised		VALADEZ, D. K.
