The male stated he attempted get out of the way, but the truck would not stop. Officers asked the male where the other driver was and he stated the other driver took off. The male was unsteady on his feet, with his jeans falling off of him. The male's belt was undone and his zipper was down, but his jeans were buttoned barely holding them around his thighs. The male used his vehicle for stability as he spoke with officers. The male made eye contact with officers, but appeared as if he was looking through them (thousand yard stare). The male's speech while clear, was slow and drawn out. The male while talking would stop leaning on the vehicle to explain what happened in the accident, but he would then quickly go back to leaning on the vehicle. The male at one point looked as if he would go into the seated position while his back was still against the vehicle. Officers asked The male if he could pull up his jeans. The male responded with he had pain to the left side of his stomach, so that is why his pants were undone. Officers had the male walk to the driver side of the vehicle and sit in the driver seat, while officers requested AMR. As the male began walking from the passenger side of the vehicle to the driver seat, officers observed the male use the vehicle again for stability (keeping contact with his hand to the car at all times). The male, once sitting in the driver seat, was asked if he had any medical conditions like diabetes. The male's eyes also appeared to be red in color. Once AMR arrived on scene I informed them of the male's diabetic issues. AMR checked the male's blood sugar and informed officers his blood sugar levels were where they needed to be. After AMR informed officers of the male's levels were okay, officers read the male Implied Consent. The male stated he understood the Implied Consent and he agreed to a blood draw at the hospital. The male began to refuse AMR for further evaluation at the hospital , but began having issues with the left side of his stomach again. The male then agreed to go by ambulance to the hospital. Due to the male having pain to his stomach and not able to stand on his own, field sobriety tests (SFST) were not conducted due to safety concerns. The male was then placed in the back of the ambulance for transport to Deaconess Mid-Town. Prior to officers following AMR to Deaconess Mid-Town, the registered owner of the truck was contacted.
