Indiana Democrats Accused Of Not Having A Winning Message'

NOVEMBER 2024 By Dwight Adams The Indiana Citizen

This fall, Indiana Democrats held hopes that they could defend their 30 seats in the state legislature and maybe even pick up a few more. They called their effort to gain more balance in the Indiana General Assembly their "Break the Supermajority" tour.

However, those expectations fell short after Tuesday's election, with that trend especially evident in Indianapolis' northern suburbs and other key races statewide. One expert on Indiana politics said a key reason might be because the Democrats don't have a winning message for Hoosier voters.

"Obviously, Republicans did as well as they could have hoped. They're going to have a supermajority again," said Aaron Dusso, associate professor of political science at University-Indianapolis. Indiana "From the Democrats' perspective, they have to be bitterly disappointed at failing to break through. They have to be asking themselves, 'What are we doing wrong?' because they're not making any headway."

In one such race, an open seat in House District 24, which includes parts of Boone and western Hamilton counties, Republican Hunter Smith, a former punter with the Indianapolis Colts and now a local farmer, won the seat formerly held by Republican Donna Schaibley by garnering 56% of the vote versus nearly 44% for Democrat Josh

And in another race in District 39, which centers around Carmel, Republicans and Democrats battled over another open seat, which had been held for nearly three decades by Republican Jerry Torr before he decided not to run for reelection. Despite the Democrats fielding a candidate, Matt McNally, who had run a close race against Torr in 2022, the GOP candidate, Pacers Sports & Entertainment executive Danny Lopez won the seat with nearly 54% of the vote to McNally's 46%.

In another closely watched race in District 62, covering Bloomington, Brown County and part of Jackson County, Republican incumbent Dave Hall was leading his Democratic challenger, Thomas Horrocks, as of 4 p.m. Wednesday with 51.1% of the vote, compared to Horrocks' 48.9%.

The race for another Indianapolisarea seat in District 25, which covers parts of Boone and Hendricks counties, was too close to call Wednesday afternoon, with incumbent Republican Becky Cash holding onto 50.1% of the vote, compared to 49.9% for the Democratic challenger, Tiffany Stoner.

In other important races, longtime Republicans carried their seats. That includes Ed Soliday, first elected in 2006, who kept his House District 4 seat, which includes Valparaiso. Greg Steuerwald, who has been in the Indiana House since 2007 and is now majority caucus chair, also won reelection to his District 40 seat, which includes a portion of Hendricks County, including Avon.

Democrats: 'Not what we hoped Indiana's Republicans currently hold a 70-30 advantage in the General Assembly. That supermajority means that they control at least two-thirds of the seat in the legislature and can conduct business, including passing legislation, without the other party's participation or as-

The Indiana Democratic Party released a statement late Tuesday from Chairman Mike Schmuhl that clearly expressed their disappointment in the outcome of the 2024 Statehouse races.

"Tonight, the results were not what we hoped for, but we want to thank the millions of Hoosiers who made their voices heard in this election, and our statewide candidates Jennifer McCormick, Terry Goodin, Destiny Wells, and Valerie McCray for running meaningful campaigns and connecting with Hoosier voters across our state," Schmuhl said. "We still believe Hoosiers deserve more balance in our state's politics and a party that works every day to hold our state government to account, and fights for more freedoms and opportunity. That's what our party will continue to do in the coming weeks, months, and years."

Schmuhl also said in his statement that the Democrats' unsuccessful campaigns, including those of McCormick, who ran for governor; Wells, who sought the attorney general's seat; and McCray, who was the first Black woman to become a major party nominee for U.S. Senate in Indiana, brought integrity and a "message of hope, optimism and a better future" for "workers, women and all Hoosiers."

Randy Head, chairman of the Indiana Republican Party, championed his party's success in a statement to the press on Wednesday.

"Republicans had a huge red wave in Indiana," Head said. "Our state was among the first to get called for Trump. Our governor-elect Mike Braun won by historic margins, Senator-elect Jim Banks had a huge win of 20 points, Attorney General Todd Rokita won his race by nearly 20 points and will continue to represent our state fighting for Hoosiers."

Head also commented on the GOP's continued dominance in the state legislature.

"We are proud that we will retain our super majorities in both the House and Senate. We look forward to the leadership our ticket will bring to the statehouse and in D.C. in 2025 and beyond."

Was winning four more seats realistic?

Democratic leaders in Indiana attended a party caucus vote in June in Jeffersonville to elect a candidate to replace Rep. Rita Fleming, a Democrat who was retiring from her seat representing House District 71.

Democratic party faithful elected Wendy Dant Chesser in the caucus vote to replace Fleming. In what could be a bright spot for Indiana's garnering 49.9% of the vote so far, compared to her GOP opponent Scott Hawkins' 46.3%. At a small news conference before the June vote, Schmuhl and colleagues promoted an effort, called the "Break the Supermajority" tour, to flip at least four seats from the Republicans to the Democrats in the 2024 election. Rep. Carey Hamilton, D-Indianapolis, who attended the caucus, told The Citizen at the time that she knew the task would be difficult, since the Democrats also would have to hold onto their 30 current seats, but Hamilton said the goal was achievable.

Democrats have said they believed they could loosen the GOP's grip on the Indiana House if they struck a moderate tone to counterbalance what they called the growextremism of Indiana Republicans. They assert that Republicans were not representing the views of Hoosiers on important issues, such as abortion rights, support for public education, gun safety and the legalization of medical marijuana.

However, Dusso is calling those assumptions into question.

For one, he said the state's Democrats need a new strategy going forward, when he was asked whether the Democrats' goals were realistic.

"If the idea that you want to break a supermajority isn't realistic, then obviously you're not a com petitive party anymore. ... What they're doing is not connecting with Indiana voters," Dusso said. "Their message has been, 'We're like Republicans but we're nicer.' But that's not a winning message."

He also said that calling Republicans "extremists" clearly isn't resonating with Hoosier voters, either.

"I understand originally the strategy, but it's at least 15 years old at this point. It's not working. It's time to move on," Dusso said. "They ... Just calling someone extreme is not good enough."

Voters show frustration with political rhetoric

In talking with Hoosier voters at polling places in Zionsville and Carmel on Tuesday, a theme of dissatisfaction with extreme political rhetoric emerged.

Allison Dusko, a voter in Carmel's District 24, said "politics is so ter-"People don't even pay attention to the issues," she said. "They just vote along the party line. It's silly to not know what the issues are." Kyle McCarty, who voted in Zionsville's District 25, said he "hates" the current political atmosphere. "I'm pretty moderate," McCarty said. "I think the hyperbole that I see on each end of the spectrum is pretty crazy. The extremes we see all over, it's pretty exhausting." Dusso said extreme political rhetoric is "a problem for democracy in general. There is a real danger there,

(that) you lose trust in government and so forth." When asked whether extreme rhetoric and political stances might be affecting Hoosiers' trust or willingness to vote, Dusso said "probably not." However, he did say that in the wake of this week's election, Indiana Republicans' positions on issues, such as educational policy, might actually "move more to the right." He also doubted any gun regulations would pass, adding "certainly not at the state level."

"They'll (Indiana Republicans) do whatever they want to do because they face no opposition. There's no indication that anyone in their position has anything to worry about," Dusso said.

Dusso also said the lack of truly competitive races in Indiana could have adverse effects, including possibly the development of an insular attitude among the state's residents.

"The issue is when you have this one-party state and this divide, what happens is that we as an electorate become less sensitive to the outside world," Dusso said. "When you have uncompetitive elections, when you have this high divide between Republicans and Democrats, you have a context that there's nowhere for voters to go (if they disagree) ... because there's no other option. We're totally immune to anything that happens. We'll stick with our party regard-

How We Got Here And The Path Forward

NOVEMBER 2024 By John Krull

It's always easier to see clearly once the smoke has begun to clear.
The 2024 election is over.

Thank goodness.

This year's contest was an ugly, dispiriting one. Both sides in this epic American dispute claimed to be misunderstood and victimized, but neither side seemed at all interested in listening to or addressing the other's concerns.

Perhaps this should have been expected.

Elections are portraits of the national mood.

While they may not be the deciding forces Americans often wish they would be, elections can tell us what, at a moment in time, we as a people care about, what we fear and what we want.

This year's portrait revealed a deeply divided country.

Former President and now, once again, President-Elect Donald Trump spoke during his victory remarks as the ballots still were being counted of the need to unify the country.

That will be easier said than done. Even the unwieldy combination that came together to send him back to the White House seems combustible. Just hours after it became clear that Trump's restoration was at hand, the plutocrats who had lined up with him were at odds with the hardline white nationalists who long have backed him over whose interests and agenda should take priority.

The billionaire class resists notions of tariffs and mass deportations because they don't want to see inflation climb and sources of cheap labor cut off. The hardcore MAGA base wants to give America a face that more closely resembles theirs.

It's hard to see how Trump will keep both sides happy—and that's only one dispute within his quarrelsome political family.

Trump's troubles in holding a coalition together, though, are minor in comparison with those of his opponents in the Democratic Party.

Trump's vote total dropped slightly from 2020 to 2024, but that decline was minuscule in comparison with what the Democrats lost.

In 2020, Joe Biden captured 81 million votes. As I write this, ballots still are being counted in Arizona, California and elsewhere, but it's clear that, when the counting is done, Kamala Harris will have won somewhere on either side of 70 million votes.

That's a drop of more than 10 million votes in four years.

Certain political observers attribute the decline to racism and misogyny. They say that a lot of Americans simply won't vote for a presidential candidate who is Black or a woman or, in this case, both.

Doubtless, there is considerable truth to this assertion, but I don't think it's the whole explanation.

Politicians often are the worst at understanding what voters say. Because they are so close to the action, they run the message through the filter of their own plans, ambitions and desires.

Biden and the Democrats read the 2020 election results as a message that Americans were hungry for an updated New Deal, a sweeping package of progressive programs.

They were wrong.

Americans turned out in record numbers in 2020 because they were tired of Trump's instability and his inability—the COVID-19 pandemic being the prime example—to deal with any crisis he did not create himself.

thing Biden planned. It was a rejection of how Trump had performed as president.

It was not an endorsement of any-

In other words, much of the Biden vote four years ago was less for Biden than it was against Trump.

Biden had four years to sell Americans on his agenda. While he did rack up impressive, even historic, legislative accomplishments as president, he failed miserably at one essential presidential task.

He did not persuade his fellow citizens that his agenda and his accomplishments were of value to them.

If he, Harris and other Democrats had been able to do that, the election might have had a different outcome.

Because they didn't, they got shellacked on Election Day.

Trump and his supporters now do huge happy dances over their return to power and read the election results as a license to do whatever they want.

They shouldn't.

They didn't win this election.

Democrats lost it.

The more than 140 million ballots cast in this election didn't change the essential truth of America at this moment.

We are still a deeply divided nation. Whichever party is in the ascendancy is always going to be on the edge of losing its hold on power.

Until one party or the other starts listening to—and persuading—the folks on the other side.

Zion Evangelical UCC Gifts Church Site To Aurora

NOVEMBER 2024

After 175 years as an active church in the Evansville community, Zion Evangelical United Church of Christ held their final service on Sunday, October 27th, at 10:30 AM. At this last service, a ceremonial passing of the keys will take place between members and leadership at Zion Evangelical UCC to staff and leadership from Aurora – Zac Heronemus (Executive Director), Aurora Board of Director Members, and Aurora team members.

This last service and ceremony will represent Zion's commitment to continuing their legacy through the gifting of their property to Aurora, Inc., the leading homeless services agency in Evansville and Southwestern Indiana. As part of the transfer of this historic site located next to United Caring Services, Aurora is working to develop the site to meet the needs of our community through an integrated, 41-unit housing development focused on Permanent Supportive Housing (PSH) for families with on-site case management, and affordable units for 60% AMI households and below

This development will ensure the continuation of Zion's legacy in our community by providing housing for individuals and families experiencing homelessness in Evansville. Moving forward, Aurora will adaptively repurpose the historic sanctuary for use as a community room for residents and core human and homeless services partner agencies. Also, as part of this project, Aurora will be relocating its Street Outreach Team on-site to better position this vital team in our community for impacting the lives of unhoused people.

UCC to Aurora will have a tremendous impact on our organization in so many ways – housing people who are experiencing homelessness, helping realign our programs to better serve our community, and strengthening all of Aurora's programs across the board." – Zac Heronemus, Executive Director, Aurora What led us (Zion Evangelical)

UCC) to our gifting to Aurora "In March 2023, our congregation

"In March 2023, our congregation began a discernment process focusing congregational conversations on presenting trends and patterns of religious affiliation and membership participation not only within our own faith community but throughout the United States. This discernment process included an honest and diligent analysis of the resources (financial, buildings and ground, human) God has gifted Zion Evangelical United Church of Christ; such resources are necessary to conduct its mission in this time and place. Our goal was to use that which had been entrusted to us in a manner that would reflect our faithfulness as stewards of God's gifts to this congregation, planning for the future of this historical, sacred place and ensuring that its legacy lives on.

Although our congregants are faithful, most are now over age seventy, and unfortunately membership decline continues. Our focus was identifying potential use(s) for this sacred space and an ongoing ministry within the community that would continue the ministry set forth 175 years ago when this beloved church was founded in downtown Evansville.

As we look at this project with Aurora, we rejoice in the ability to celebrate our rich 175-year legacy, knowing we do so with a sense of hope for a caring, transforming ministry in the future for many years to come. Although the interior of the sanctuary will be repurposed as a part of the project, the exterior of the church building will look as it has since the 1800's, preserving this historical landmark. The congregation made the decision to allow both the Sunday School building and the parsonage to be torn down for the development of a new structure that will transform the lives of many, continuing Zion Evangelical United Church of Christ's 175-year legacy."—Michele Daum, Co-President, Zion Evangelical United Church of Christ Council

"We are so grateful to the congregation and leadership at Zion for entrusting Aurora to carry on this wonderful legacy in helping transform lives. Our board and team at Aurora are excited for this next step in the more than 35-year history of this organization and the increased potential for positively impacting the lives of unhoused individuals and families moving forward through this development on the site of historic Zion Evangelical UCC." – Zac Heronemus, Executive Director, Aurora

UE's Center For Innovation & Change Enters Partnership

NOVEMBER 2024

The University of Evansville's (UE) Center for Innovation & Change (CIC) enters a new phase through a partnership with the Indiana Center for Emerging Technologies (ICET) and Evansville Regional Economic Partnership (E-REP). The CIC will now have a presence downtown for collaboration on change-making projects. This partnership represents a significant step forward in the organizations' shared missions of fostering supporting innovation, talent growth within our community, and improving the quality of life in this

The CIC has experienced rapid growth in recent years, becoming home to Evansville's Promise Neighborhood team and Coordinating Partner with the UE School of Education for Toyota's Driving Possibilities initiative. A unique and rapidly responsive resource to problemsolving in this region, the CIC's presence downtown will make it more available to individuals, businesses, non-profits, and municipal entities looking to innovate in their sectors and interested in working with student consultants on a project. Any group interested in partnering with a UE ChangeLab team can now easily access the team able to organize that work. In addition, due to the proximity to E-REP and ICET, the CIC can better direct its programming to strategic needs in this region. "We could not be more grateful to E-REP and the ICET for this opportunity to bring changemaking resources downtown," CIC Executive Director Erin Lewis stated. "UE exists to change lives and change the world. Being next to our region's best strategic thinkers means we can co-design a better future with the community. This is a game-changing move that brings higher education into the real world in an innovative new way. I can't wait to see what comes of it."

The Evansville Regional Economic Partnership (E-REP) and the Indiana Center for Emerging Technologies (ICET), also recently announced a new partnership between their two entities. The collaboration consists of the ICET and its team having a regular presence on the first floor of Innovation Pointe, which will bring technical expertise, resources, and collaboration opportunities to entrepreneurs throughout southern Indiana.

Logan Jenkins, Executive Director of the ICET and Circular Venture Lab, has already partnered with the CIC on multiple initiatives in the last nine months. Their early work in economic development, technology transfer initiatives, and regional collaboration has garnered four national prize awards through the U.S Department of Energy (DOE) and the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA). Students from Bosse High School, UE and more have worked with Jenkins and Lewis on a wide range of topics related to the environment, the energy transition, and materials recy-

Jenkins explains, "Together with partners in our region, across Indiana, and through the U.S. DOE and U.S. SBA, we've demonstrated multiple successful collaborations. These early ideas originated in Evansville, then were developed through the UE CIC and its ChangeLab students, and now have recognition across the United States. These initiatives have significant relevance to the many efforts across Indiana to further educate and retain our young talent in their early workforce pathways and business careers. The co-location with the CIC and EREP opens the door to new possibilities and more innovative solutions with measurable impact.

UE Secures $400,000 Safespace Grant From DOJ

NOVEMBER 2024

The University of Evansville (UE) has secured a nearly $400,000 grant from the United States Department of Justice, Office on Violence Against Women, to fund and create Project Safespace, a new initiative focused on preventing and addressing sexual assault, domestic and dating violence, and stalking on campus. This project will benefit all UE students, with a special focus on supporting LGBTQ+ students, students with disabilities, and international students. Project Safespace will bring to-partners, including the Evansville Police Department, Albion Fellows

Bacon Center, and local LGBTQ+ service provider Matthew 25. Through workshops, training sessions, and awareness programs, UE will work to foster a safe campus environment. Activities will include training for bystander intervention and educational programs about healthy relationships.

"We want to create a culture where students feel empowered to speak up and foster environment that promotes safety for everyone," said Keith Gehlhausen, Executive Director of Human Resources & Institutional Equity. "Project Safespace will help us continue to build a campus community where everyone feels safe and supported."

UE plans to implement this project over the coming years, guided by a new Project Director and input from students who will help shape ongoing efforts.

The University of Evansville is a private, comprehensive university with a solid foundation in the arts and sciences and professional schools in business, engineering, education, and health sciences. Established in 1854, UE is recognized across the globe for its rich tradition of innovative, academic excellence and dynamic campus community of #Changemakers.

Set 1: USI 22, SIUE 25

USI jumped out to a three-point lead capitalizing on early errors from the Cougars. However, the Cougars woke up rattling off a five-point run to gain a 6-4 lead. Senior Carly Sobieralski placed dimes across the court to senior Jasmine Green, senior Paris Downing, junior Bianca Anderson, and sophomore Leah Coleman as the Eagles tied the match at 16. SIUE won the crunch time points mounting a 5-2 run to conclude the set finishing with a .293 hitting percentage.

Set 2: USI 25, SIUE 23

The middle hitters for USI of Anderson and Downing dominated set two. The Cougars seemed to have USI in a blender with a 11-17 deficit and zero blocks up to that point. However, the Eagles mounted a 9-1 run taking a 20-18. Downing finished the set on an absolute team contributing to five straight points with three kills and two block assists. The senior crushed a kill after the Cougars mounted a three-point run on set point as she finished with seven set kills and four blocks. Anderson also swatted six set kills as the Eagles controlled the match through the middle in set two.

Set 3: USI 18, SIUE 25

USI was forced to call an early timeout after struggling with receptions trailing 8-2. Anderson stopped the bleeding with a critical slide. Willis came alive with two kills and a solo block bringing the Eagles within four. The Cougars erupted on a 6-1 run to double up the Eagles at 18-9. USI made a late set charge, but the Cougars prevailed winning set three. After three sets, SIUE showed more efficiency with their passes and swings hitting .252, while USI hit a .188 percent-

Set 4: USI 22, SIUE 25

Despite the significant set three loss, USI gained some momentum at the end of the set which carried into set four. Junior Keira Moore delivered a service ace and Anderson smoked two kills earning a 7-6 lead. SIUE recorded another ace taking a 15-12 lead into the media timeout. The Cougars swatted their 12th block and 10th service to extend their lead to 19-14. Senior Abby Weber added a service ace along with kills from Willis, Sobieralski, and Coleman mounting a four-point run. However, USI failed to convert at the end of sets dropping the first matchup in Edwardsville.

As a team, USI finished with 51 kills, 47 assists, 74 digs, three aces, ten blocks, and a .120 attacking percentage. The Cougars earned 54 kills, 45 assists, 68 digs, ten aces, 12 blocks, and a .203 hitting percentage.

UE's Johnson And Rosborough Named To All-MVC Third Team

NOVEMBER 2024

University of Evansville women's soccer had two players earn a place on the Missouri Valley Conference's all-conference third team.

The MVC announced the 2024 Women's Soccer all-conference teams on Wednesday with Purple Aces Rachel Rosborough (Mt. Brydges, Ontario) and Taylor Johnson (Evansville, Ind. / Reitz HS) making the third team. The two players combined to score four of UE's nine goals in the 2024 season and 22 shots.

Rosborough and Johnson were voted to the league's all-conference third team in a vote of the league's head coaches. Rosborough started and played a full 90 minutes in all 16 matches this year along UE's backline helping Evansville record five shutouts. She finished the year fourth on the team in shots, recorded her first goal since 2021, and set the Aces program record for most minutes played in a career at 6,596.

Johnson played in all 16 matches for UE while starting in 14 matches. Johnson was Evansville's leading scorer in 2024 along with freshman Emmy Brenner (Arlington, Tenn. / St. Benedict at Auburndale HS) with three goals. Johnson recorded 11 shots over 16 matches with seven landing on goal for 63.6% accuracy.

For Rosborough, it marked the fifth-straight year in which she was honored in the league's post-season awards for her hard work in defense for UE. She earned MVC All-Freshman team honors in the COVID Spring season of 2021, before earning honorable mention all-Valley honors as a sophomore later that fall, third-team all-MVC honors in 2022, and second-team all-MVC honors in 2023. This is Johnson's first postseason recognition with the Aces. Missouri State swept the postseason individual awards after a dominating 9-0-1 run in Valley play. Evansville was the only team to play spoiler to the Bears with their lone tie of MVC action. Senior forward Julia Kristensen was named the MVC Player of the Year while senior Jenna Anderson was named Defensive Player of the Year. For the second season in a row graduate goalkeeper Camilla Day was named the Goalkeeper of the Year. While freshman defender Jane Hansen was named the Freshman of the Year.

Morehead State Ends USI Soccer's Season

NOVEMBER 2024

University of Southern Indiana Women's Soccer had its 2024 season come to an end Sunday afternoon at Strassweg Field following a 2-1 loss to Morehead State University in the Ohio Valley Confer-Women's Soccer Championship Tournament quarterfinals.

Sunday's battle was an electrifying, competitive match between the fifth-seeded Morehead State Eagles (9-6-5, 4-3-2 OVC) and the fourth-seeded Southern Indiana Screaming Eagles (5-9-5, 4-2-3 OVC). USI drew Morehead State in the quarterfinal matchup after Morehead State defeated No. 8 seed University of Tennessee at Martin, 1-0, in the first round on Thursday.

Southern Indiana struck for an early goal as they did a week ago against Western Illinois University. The high pressure by USI forced a Morehead State turnover. Junior midfielder Peyton Murphy was able to get a tap onto the ball up to redshirt freshman Eva Boer. Boer took it the rest of the way and put the ball into the net to give USI a 1-0 lead in the fourth minute. It was Boer's third goal of the season to tie for the team lead.

Just past the 20-minute mark of the first half, Morehead State pushed into the attacking third and had a series of corner kicks. The USI defense remained solid with a few blocks and redshirt sophomore goalkeeper Anna Markland snagged three saves during the stretch. The game remained 1-0 USI into the late stretch of the opening half.

With less than two minutes until halftime, junior forward Peyton Seymour almost doubled USI's lead with a quality opportunity. Seymour received the ball in the box and turned toward the net, but her shot missed just to the left of the goal. Southern Indiana's 1-0 advantage carried into the inter-

Morehead State came out of the break with pressure into the attacking third. The visiting Eagles capitalized on a shot from the top of the box that snuck under the crossbar for the game-tying goal in the 55th minute to knot the match at 1-1.

Later in the second half, Southern Indiana had a run with breakaway opportunities, but three offsides in a five-minute span halted those chances. While Morehead State's goalkeeper smothered a pair of other chances in one-on-one situations, USI nearly had a prime opportunity in the 84th minute when Boer received a cross about 12 yards into the box. However, Morehead State's defense made it difficult for Boer to make a clean turn and put enough power behind a shot, leading to a keeper save.

Morehead State scored the game-winning goal and took the 2-1 lead with two and a half minutes left on a header off a corner kick. USI looked to respond with one last attempt to even the match again when another breakaway chance resulted in a wide shot and ending the match with the final whistle.

With Sunday's result, Morehead State advanced to the OVC tournament semifinals to face No. 1 seed Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville, Tennessee Thursday afternoon.

Statistically, Southern Indiana

had 10 shots with five on goal

Sunday afternoon. Morehead State totaled 15 shots with nine on target. Morehead State also had an 11-2 advantage in corner kicks. Individually, Boer and junior midfielder Emerson Grafton led USI with three shots and two on goal in the contest. Between the posts, Markland corralled seven

The Screaming Eagles finished year three of their D-I transition with their third straight appearance in the OVC tournament and a second consecutive season as a quarterfinal host as the No. 4 seed. USI also set new program marks in its D-I era with four OVC wins, 15 points in the conference season, and 20 goals scored this season. Next, USI Women's Soccer will turn its attention to preparing for the 2025 season. USI fans can stay up-to-date with the latest at usiscreamingeagles.com or follow USI Athletics on social media.

VU would even the score at 61-61 with 3:30 to play before the Lions answered back with five straight.

Vincennes refused to go away, closing out regulation with a three-point play by sophomore and 2024 NJCAA All-American Lebron Thomas (Bishopville, S.C.) and a basket by sophomore Bryan Akanmu (Paris, France) evening the score again at 66-66 with 28 seconds left.

The VU defense would hold, sending this game into overtime.

In the overtime period, the two teams began by trading shots back and forth, with VU getting a spark off of a three by freshman Christian Andrews (Asheville, N.C.) before Lebron Thomas sealed the game late at the free throw line, closing out the victory for the Blazers by the final score 80-73.

"We just made more solid plays," VU Hall of Fame Head Coach Todd Franklin said. "I thought we fought on the defensive end pretty well except for the last five minutes of the first half. Those last five minutes we gave in to a little bit of the 'we're ahead and I'm tired' mentality and we were a little slow on close outs, a little soft on post defense. We got a little loose and we gave them a chance to get momentum and then it was a heck of a thing to get it away from them."

"I thought we were fighting and trying to get traction the first 10 minutes of the second half," Franklin added. "We just couldn't quite finish plays and make the little shots. Of course they throw up one at the shot clock from about 40 feet. But we showed a lot of toughness tonight. We didn't do anything special. We just said we need to get solid and get stops. We know what we need to do to

UE Heads To Western Michigan For MVC Tourney

NOVEMBER 2024

The University of Evansville men's soccer team begins the 2024 postseason in the Mitten

The Purple Aces ended the regular season with a draw at home against the Belmont Bruins. It was the fourth time in five meetings that UE and the Bruins MVC match ended in a draw. Evansville took the lead twice over 90 minutes but Belmont was able to find the equalizers for both teams to earn a point. The Aces head into the MVC Tournament as the fifth seed of six after securing a spot in the tournament with a win over Bowling Green at the end of October.

This will be the fifth time the Aces have been the #5 seed with a 1-3 record in prior MVC Tournaments. UE's only win as a fifth seed came against Vanderbilt in 1999. Evansville will have a rematch with the Western Michigan Broncos after a close 2-1 loss on September 22nd. Freshman defender Martin Wurschmidt (Fram, Norway) scored his first collegiate goal for the Aces in the 63rd minute of that match. As the fourth seed the Broncos closed out the regular season with a 11-1-6 record and a 3-1-4 record. WMU beat out UE for the fourth seed with the head-tohead tiebreaker.

Senior forward Nacho Diaz Barragan (Almeria, Spain) scored his third brace of the 2024 season on Wednesday.

Diaz Barragan scored both of Evansville's goals against the Bruins in the 16th and 56th minutes. Diaz Barragan is one of only two players in the MVC with three or more braces on the season along with Valley goals leader Missouri State's Jesus Barea. Leading the Aces with eight goals in 2024 Diaz Barragan ended the regular season fourth in the MVC and 52nd in the country.

UE had its best regular season in eight years in 2024. Evansville's eight regular season wins are the most since the program's 10 win season in 2017. While the Aces four conference wins is their best showing in Valley play since winning four matches in 2016. UE has not had a five win conference season since 2009.
