I transported the subject to the VCCC. While en route, the subject made furtive movements while seated. Despite his hands being cuffed behind him and being secured with a safety belt, he was able to lean to the side and manipulate his pants and pockets. He did this multiple times, despite my comments each time I observed him moving. When I questioned his movements, he claimed his hand was numb. I continued to observe him manipulating something in his hands for an extended period. Eventually, after multiple instances of leaning over and making furtive movements, the subject ceased his actions. Once at the jail, I conducted a more thorough search of the subject. During the search, I located a torn clear plastic corner baggie containing a white	REID, M. J.
