Little said the coins were worth around $500 and the jacket was worth $30. Little said he did not know who would have done this, but suspected a kid next door could have. Little was asked if he had looked for the items in his home and responded by saying they were not where he left them. When Little was asked why he waited so long to report the items missing, he said it was because it took a while to figure out the items were gone.  Little was provided with a case number.		AKER, B.
