No victims listed.  Officers were notified by Evansville Animal Control that they received information that a dog was illegally tethered (short walking leash looped on a fence post) to the fence in the backyard of the Carriage House Apartments.  Officers arrived and located the dog in the backyard of the apartment tethered to the chest high wooden privacy fence. Officers observed the dog (Coco) had its paw caught in the leash (leash was only long enough for the dog to sit). Coco was pressed up against the fence attempting to get out of the frigid air (temps reading 24 degrees). Coco was seen visibly shivering as the wind blew hard, cutting through the yard and slats on the fence.  Officers quickly entered the backyard due to the Coco's paw being twisted. Coco was able to break her paw free as she hunkered down, collar tightening around her neck because of the shortness of the leash. Coco appeared to be thin, multiple ribs and notches on the spin showing, stomach sunk in on the sides. The back door to the apartment opened and hired contractors walked out, informing officers the residents were inside.  Officers entered the apartment and announced themselves. Officers made contact with one of the female owners. She was placed in handcuffs. Officers made contact with the second female owner who began to tense up and pull away from officers. She was later placed in handcuffs.  Both females were walked outside and read Miranda, which they stated they understood. Both females took ownership over Coco. They stated Coco was only outside for an hour. Coco being a pitbull breed is recommended to not be outside for longer than 15 minutes due to the below freezing temperatures. It was later found by the contractors that they got there at 0730 stating that the dog was already outside before they got there. They had not seen anyone tend to the dog until police arrive around 1000 hours.  Animal Control did seize Coco. Coco was still seen shivering in the heated animal control truck, after being covered with a blanket and being in there for 10 or more minutes. Both females were cited for neglect and then released.
