Officers approached the vehicle and the driver immediately advised that she had a warrant. Officers had the driver exit the vehicle, placed her into custody, and confirmed she had an active warrant. Before officers began to inventory the vehicle for tow, officers observed a hypodermic syringe/needle in plain view on the floorboard between the driver's seat and the driver side door. Officers advised the driver of her Miranda Rights, which she stated she understood. The driver stated she was not aware that any needles were in the car and that she has no use for them. Officers conducted a probable cause search of the car and located a folded up $1 bill containing a green leafy substance. It was immediately apparent to officers that the green leafy substance was marijuana. Officers also located a black magnet box in the car, which is consistent with equipment used to contain or conceal narcotics.
	Officers transported the driver to VCCC where she was booked on her warrant as well as the listed charges. The needle, marijuana, and black magnet box were bagged and placed into evidence at VCCC.
